

Student Eye Health Tests

At Glen Ellyn Vision Center it is our intention to provide you with the most comprehensive vision and eye health examination possible. Of the many essential procedures involved in determining the total health of your eyes, two of the most important tests are:

- 1) Binocular Vision Examination: used to determine the strengths and weaknesses of the muscles that move the eyes. Eye muscle coordination difficulties can result in poor grades, long-lasting and unhealthy reading habits, even disinterest in school. Problems detected through testing can be successfully treated. The most immediate method is through the doctor's eyeglass prescription. In more severe cases, visual therapy will provide a solution to eye coordination problems.

- 2) Fundus Photography: pictures taken of your retina, provides the doctor with a permanent photographic record of the back of your eye. Through the consistent use of fundus photography, even the smallest, most gradual change can be seen, diagnosed, and treated quickly.

Unfortunately, these tests are not always covered by your insurance plan. Your vision insurance plan will cover the refractive portion of the exam while some major medical insurances may cover these tests for diagnostic purposes. These tests are a part of our comprehensive eye examination, and we feel that declining these procedures deprive you of two important components of our complete evaluation of eye health. We ask you to help our doctors give you the most thorough eye exam possible.

Refusing to undergo these tests impairs the ability of our doctors to detect some forms of early eye diseases and binocular vision disorders. If you choose to decline these procedures, we cannot be held responsible for a problem that may have been detected through the use of these tests.
